Quarry opponents sound petty

Dan Scott's letter dealing with inaccurate information being passed along by opponents of Liberty Quarry really hit the nail on the head (Community Voices, May 27).

I entered the quarry debate early because I recognized that people leading the anti-quarry movement knew nothing about the aggregate business. They were spewing forth a bunch of baloney, trying to scare residents into believing that every imaginable disease would plague this valley if Granite Construction was allowed to establish Liberty Quarry.

They failed to understand that quarries have been operating all over without catastrophic results, and as we deplete existing supplies, new quarries must be developed.

Now that the criticisms are being addressed, some of the opponents continue to malign Granite Construction by engaging in senseless personal attacks against its employees and those who support its right to conduct business. You'd think they would realize how petty they sound, but apparently they do not.

In a future letter, I will discuss the unusually high quality of rock in the proposed area, as well as the lack of silica, making it an ideal place for a quarry.

Rick, (LTE) As soon as you move your family to Redhawk your input will matter. While living in Wildomar your input into the proposed project is void. My son as asthma and according to the large majority of doctors, this is a bad idea. So, who am I going to trust; Doctors or a business looking to make a buck?
